

1. Strobel mentions talking with someone who “dismisses Christianity as a mythology-ridden anachronism” or “paints you into a rhetorical corner and belittles your beliefs.”
  - Has this happened to you?
  - How well were you prepared?
2. Explain the reason for your answer to this question: When I think about discussing Christianity with nonbelievers...
  - I relish the encounter.
  - I’m willing, but nervous and uncertain.
  - It scares me, but I try anyway.
  - I try to avoid it.

3. What from this chapter was most encouraging?

4. What was most challenging?

Chapter 2: Reservations

5. What kind of reservations have you struggled with? (fear of causing division or alienation, viewing any opposition as hostility, desire to avoid all conflict, fear of rejection, fear of losing control/anger, etc.)

6. What was your response to the concept of 'gardening'?

7. What was most encouraging from this chapter?

8. What was most challenging?